Guideposts

February 11, 1970

Dear Mr. Rubinstein:

I understand, of course.

However, I would like to plead just once, softly, for a reconsideration.

My reasoning is very simple. The leverage we would get toward Protestants and Catholics understanding the Jewish situation in Palestine is immense at Guideposts. Yes, you were seen by million on television. But people were thinking about music, not about our relationships with the Jews. In Guideposts you will have a chance to reach some ten million more with this good-story-of-understanding. And, frankly, it strikes me that today it is impossible to have too much understanding between us.

I hope very sincerely, indeed, that I have succeeded in expressing my deep desire to bring your story to our readers. I hope you will be able to cooperate for I know that you will if you can.

En agape,

John Sherrill
