Sol Hurok, who again presents the Moiseyev Dancers at Met Opera on Tuesday, lists Toscanini, Arthur Rubinstein, Nureyev, Margot Fonteyn, Anna Pavlova, Robert Helpmann, Marian Anderson, Markova and the Moiseyev dancers as particularly great talents. Hurok recalls that when Rubinstein was only 16 he made a whirlwind U.S. tour, playing 75 concerts in three months. He arrived in San Francisco just as the 1906 earthquake terrified the city, and he never has forgotten seeing Enrico Caruso "running like a rabbit, dressed only in his nightshirt." Hurok said Toscanini's favorite tenor was Jan Peerce . . . Stiller & Meara visiting Ireland . . . Manny (Allied Artists) Wolf's film "This Man Must Die" winning preview raves.
