Dear Nela,

A quick note just to enclose this short biographical note I have written to go at the back of the book. If anything is amiss, please let me know right away.

Your instincts were absolutely right about not tampering with the lettering. But you could only see it after you had tried to work with it. Anyway both the designer and art director were much relieved because they feel the lettering has its own integrity which could be lost if it was tampered with. And I think it looks smashing as it is.

I've sent out proofs to all you marked okay and to your other suggestions. We still have a few extra copies so I am mailing two to you to give to anyone you feel would be good. It really is exciting to get such an enthusiastic response.
