My darling Nela:-

I'm sorry you had to call me twice. I was in the bath the first time. But it was such a joy to hear your voice when I did! After that Eva called and that brought me great joy too. And that wasn't all - the doorbell rang - it was a florist's boy carrying a huge basket of red roses. I tried to count them - but it was impossible. Dozens and dozens of them! I've never received anything that generous and that glorious. Magnificent! Everyone who saw them could not believe their eyes!! They lasted a week - actually. I was thrilled to death. I felt I was being spoiled to death. Certainly I had never been that spoiled. I can't thank you enough! I was deeply touched. They certainly represented a friendship that has never been matched throughout the years! How can I ever thank you? I cannot! So now I am 90. Where did the years go? One thing never changed (and never will) that amazing friendship we shared — the laughter, the crabbing in the Los Angeles river and all the children growing up under our eyes. All the things we shared - good and bad and the
