Dear Nela:

During our last telephone conversation about Jason's school you asked me to have the school contact you about the costs for Jason's trumpet lessons. I do not know if the music teacher was able to reach you or if you have made any decision about them.

The cost per lesson is $15. There was an additional cost leading to the purchase of a trumpet, but I found it was less expensive on a long run basis to buy him a trumpet at a used instrument store. So he has his trumpet, much enthusiasm, and has already started lessons.

The school explained to me that unlike most schools, they bill separately for tuition and other things. I am taking care of all his various sports activities (ice hockey at school, gym two days a week at a Gymnasium nearby, and field hockey/football with a Saturday sports club that he wants to go to). He appears to be so good at sports, I'm delighted. He also is starting Boy Scouts in January.

Please let me know what you would like to do about the music lessons.

Jason enjoyed spending the afternoon with you and pinned his pictures on the wall. He immediately went out and bought a game for Chanuka with Mr. Rubinstein's gift. We will have a quiet Christmas here. Paul is going on a vacation for the school holiday period .

Best from Jason and wishes for ahappy Christmas,

Ishe
